Join us to discuss the future of the Dougherty Arts Center!

The Dougherty Arts Center has brought joy, education and entertainment to students and visitors for 40 years. However, it has also increasingly faced challenges such as lack of space and missed opportunities for growth.

The Austin Parks and Recreation Department is in the process of creating preliminary plans for redevelopment of the Dougherty Arts Center, and a key component of this process is collecting input from the building users and the general public. This open house will give the community an opportunity to learn more about the redevelopment project, speak with representatives from the project team and submit feedback.
